

Born and raised in Miami, Florida, Laura Morgan Horton has been practicing law since 1990. She specializes in estate planning, focusing on the specific needs of each client in the preparation of wills, trusts, and advance directives. Advance directives are an important component in planning for a client's financial, medical and privacy needs in anticipation of aging or disability. With careful planning, guardianship and/or probate administration may be avoided if that comports with the client's goals. Having served with a community foundation, Laura is also able to advise clients when they express interest in utilizing charitable gifting as part of their overall estate plan.

Laura also represents clients in various real estate and corporate matters.
